The Republican party is losing its grip William Estle has joined the Democracy.

The fond anticipations of those who wanted the Dueber Watch Case Company real bad have gone glimmering.

We are indebted to Hon. John Sherman for the Report of the Committee on the Judiciary concerning the Attorney General's action in refusing to submit important papers in reference to appointments, and to Hon. William L. Scott for a copy of his speech in the House of Representatives on the coinage of the standard silver dollar.

Temperance people may take comfort from statistics on the liquor traffic recently compiled. The English Budget shows a decrease of several millions in the revenue from liquors within the past few years, and a corresponding increase in the consumption of various luxuries. A noted brewer in Cincinluxuries. A noted brewer in Cincinnati when asked by a reporter the cause of a very perceptible and lingering dullness in his line of business gave it as his opinion that the drink habit in America was gradually waning.

On the first page of this issue will be found a letter from Hon. Alphonso Hart, disproving the charges made against him by the Hillsboro Gazette and copied into several other papers. When a public William J. Gray. man is attacked in a public way he has a right to defend himself through public print, and we enjoy this opportunity of allowing the gentleman to reply. In consideration of the wide circulation which has been given to the Gazette'. ugly libel, we bespeak for his article a careful reading by every body.

Governor Foraker has not been frustrated by Parsons, Noble and Beatty, who so earnestly contend that the State bonds are exempt from taxation. He shows in black and white from the journals of the General Assembly that all State bonds were issued as taxable paper excepting those which had the words "Exempt from Taxation" written upon them. In the face of the facts produced all the fiery strictures of Beatty and the tine philosophy of his allies falls flat. It has long been fashionable for bondholders to dodge taxation, but the law does not justify them, and our Governor is determined that the law shall be

Before the week is out he is sure to be pumped dry, and will he is sure to be pumped dry, and will are so many school to be taught, and someway worse for an idea than a chicken day for a week. Before the week is out gap worse for an idea than a chicken ever did with the pip."

From the amount of slush which found its way into the columns of the Gazete last week it would seem that the Chillicothe Leader was right in supposing that the office boy had mounted the tripod. Among other things the editor-or the boy-takes occasion to interview an attorney on the subject of the Virginia military lands. That attorney may have been either member of the Gazette firm, but whoever he is, of the Gazette firm, but whoever he is, his logic is spacious. The title to the Virginia military lands is one of the dreamy uncertainties which hover over this section of country. The land was laid out to suit the whims of the original out to suit the whole out the original out to suit the whole of the original out to suit the whole of the original out to suit the original laid out to suit the whims of the original owners, and the incomplete, mutilated records of that primary division are now on file in the office of the State Auditor. On such a flimsy basis rests the title to a tract of land lying between the Miami and Scioto rivers. Law suits have arisen, and are likely to arise on account of it. The one man who is especially capable of revising and correcting these important records is Samuel Kendrick. Col. Entrekin introduced a bill authorizing the Governor, Auditor of State and Attorney General to employ Mr. Kendrick "for correcting," improvement in Mrs. Savage's health.

On Friday, April 16, the farm residence of Allen Terrell, 4 miles north of this place on the Jamestown road, was totally destroyed by fire. Mr. Terrell had been using some kind of belows to smoke the been from one hive to another, and had hung it up in the smoke house, from which that building caught fire, which resulted in the destruction of both it and the dwelling house. Mrs. Terrell was confined to her bed at the time, and after procuring help. Mr. Terrell helped her into a buggy and drove to his father's. They succeeded in saving most of the household goods, which, together with the dwelling, were insured for $1,800. Auditor. On such a flimsy basis rests ploy Mr. Kendrick "for correcting, transcribing and completing the records of entries, plats and surveys and other records of the lands contained in the Virginia military district of Ohio." This bill is what the Gacette calls a bill to pension Sam Kendrick-a "job," etc. The work is necessary and it is all the more necessary because it has been necessary so long. The act of Congress which the Gazette quotes as if it completely solved the problem might not apply in one case out of ten, and it, too, refers to the military warrants as the paramount claims upon the

She was born November, 1879, hence she would have been seven years old the coming November. The funeral was presched by Mr. James H. Barker, at Union, April 23d. She was a great favorite with all the relatives and friends and nothing was neglected that would add a moment's relief to her sufferings, but with the skill and tender nursing the tender thread at last gave way, and she ceased to live. While taking the last look at her as she lay in her little cashet, it seemed that she would like to say.

The Design of the Puritan.

It having been suggested from some unknown source that Mr. Burgess, the the Christian Church, at Fairview, for some time, closed last Thursday night with nine accessions to the church.

Messrs. Albert Fenner, Sanford McDaniel, Mattheway Source that Mr. Burgess, the designer of the Puritan, being a naturalist, had taken the belly conformation of some surface-water insect which had developed speed of movestorer and Miss Mary Wooddell visited St. bottom, a scientific friend of that gen-tleman was asked about this notion. tleman was asked about this notion. "He would more likely have taken a whale for his pattern," said he; "and if he had taken either he is such an enthusiast as a naturalist that he would certainly have mentioned the circumstance to his associates." "But the fact is," interposed another friend, "Mr. Burgers has been for years observant of all in boats that was inducive of speed, and has combined everything in the Puritan that seemed likely to contribute to her success. If he saw thing in the Puritan that seemed likely to contribute to her success. If he saw anything in a cutter worthy of adoption, you may be sure he has taken it."

"The fact is," said the first gentleman, "the Puritan as she floats is a deep center-board, and Mr. Burgess has taken ideas from illiterate boat-builders who have stumbled on to good models—men who measure with their thumbs, to speak metaphorically—as well as from the more scientific naval architects who have won fame by their productions. Whatever the result, you may rest assured that, using his own ideas as a basis, he is not egotist enough to omit the good points originated by other minds that have been brought to his notice to the endangurment of the Puritan's success."—Boston Transcript.
